Guidance Notes on Disability

Under the Equality Act 2010 you are considered to have a disability if you have 'a physical or mental impairment which has a substantial and long-term adverse effect upon your ability to carry out normal day-to-day activities'.

People who have had disabilities in the past are included. Progressive conditions, such as cancer, multiple sclerosis, muscular dystrophy and HIV infection, are covered by the Act from the point of diagnosis.

Physical and mental impairments include sensory impairments, such as those affecting sight or hearing, learning disabilities, and mental illness if it has a substantial effect on normal day to day activity.

Substantial adverse effect is more than a minor or trivial effect and goes beyond the normal differences between people. Substantial effects of a disability, which has ceased but is expected to recur at least once a year, for example rheumatoid arthritis or epilepsy, are included in the definition.

Long term effect is one which has lasted, or is likely to last, 12 months or more.

Normal day to day activities are those which are carried out by most people on a fairly regular and frequent basis. An impairment has a substantial adverse effect if it affects:

- Mobility
- Ability to lift, carry or otherwise move everyday objects
- Manual dexterity
- Speech, hearing or eyesight (excluding those who wear glasses/contact lenses)
- Physical co-ordination
- Continence
- Memory or ability to concentrate, learn or understand
- Perception of the risk of physical danger.

Anyone who is certified as blind or partially sighted by a consultant ophthalmologist, or who is registered as such by a Local Authority, is deemed to be disabled within the meaning of the Equality Act 2010.
